Our June 2019 issue of School Administrator invites psychology professors, an economist, a sociologist, the founder of Free Range Kids, an expert on generational trends and others to share their perspective on how today’s children and parents’ values, lifestyles and stressors have changed.

Feature short essays include:

- A psychology professor explores the stress of teens and device addiction as a symptom of anxiety
- The author of Small Animals: Parenthood in the Age of Fear looks at parenthood today
- An expert in adolescence discusses The Path to Purpose: How Young People Find Their Calling in Life
- An educator who deals with college freshmen offers advice on How to Raise an Adult
- The author of The Trouble with Boys addresses the shift in our view of childrearing
- A generational expert looks at Millennial parents’ expectations of Gen Z student learning
- A sociologist shares changing values of parent entitlement in an affluent school
